cial orders to destroy the Second Division.

"They wanted revenge for the defeat we handed them at Chipyong and Wonsu when we smashed their offensive last winter."

In meeting one of the renewed Red attacks Saturday, the Second Division troops let Red advance within close machinegun range. Then, while the rapid firing was poured out a withering fire, tanks roared out and picked off surviving Reds.

The main Red blows were struck east and west of Hanyang, 45 miles northeast of Seoul.

To the west, Chinese troops crossed the Hongcheon river in force in front of American and South Korean lines, posing a threat of new attack. Some wore the traditional white clothes of Korean civilians. Many led pack animals burdened with supplies.

The Reds surrounded a South Korean force which held high ground in the Hongcheon reservoir area, but the South Koreans fought clear with the support of navy planes. American patrols ran into heavy enemy automatic weapons and mortar fire in the area but pulled back without losses.

Allied officers said the Reds still had a "considerable" buildup on the central front and could be expected to renew their attacks any time.

There was little fresh word from the critical eastern front where the Reds had surged southward through a gap in the line left by the withdrawal of two South Korean divisions.

The two divisions, however, were reported still fighting as a unit. The Red chain-reaction offensive spread Saturday to the western front. A battalion of Communists attacked South Koreans northwest of Seoul. It was the strongest Communist attack in weeks in that sector.

Three Train Wreck Probes Underway

By Dan Mawr, Pa. May 19 — (AP)

Three separate investigations were underway today into cause of a Pennsylvania railroad train wreck that killed eight persons and injured 45 others yesterday.

The PHN rail, which has been why the fast-moving Red arrow apparently ignored stop signals and plowed into the rear of the stalled Philadelphia night express. Both were passenger trains.

Chief Target of the investigators was the Red Arrow's engineer, 62-year-old Frank Yenzler of Harrisburg, Pa. There were several unanswered questions about his vision.

Dr. Edward S. Clark, resident physician at Bryn Mawr hospital, said a hurried examination indicated that Yenzler had practically "no vision in his right eye."

But he added that he used no instrument and that the examination was "neither a thorough or fair test."

A PRR spokesman said engineers receive medical checkups every two or three months and commended Yenzler for "a good record."

The Red Arrow was bound from Detroit to New York. The Express, nearly two hours behind schedule after leaving Pittsburgh, had stopped to check for damaged equipment.

The state public utility commission sent investigators to the scene of the collision that broke the peace and quiet of this residential Philadelphia suburb along the main line. The Bryn Mawr hospital never was so busy.

DOROTHY DIX

Indifferent Son-in-Law

DEAR MISS DIX: I am a widow of 41. I have only one daughter, whom I have raised myself, and I had a very hard time getting her through school. We were very close to each other, and very happy until she married over a year ago. She married a boy who doesn't care anything about me, or her people. He never asks me to come to see them. For my daughter's sake I have been to their home, but when I go he doesn't speak to me or even stay in the same room with me. They live about 400 miles from me. He has no reason to treat me like this.

Before they were married I was always nice to him. I have never asked them for help, though they have plenty of everything. I am able to work and make my own living. It hurts my daughter, too, to see her husband act this way toward me. She tells me to ignore him, but that, of course, isn't as easy to do as to say. She has talked to him and asked him to be different, but with no effect.

Keeps Her Away
 He won't come with her when she comes to see me, so she doesn't get very often. His cousin is very sweet to me and they don't approve of the way he is acting either. His father offered to get me a job in the town they all live in so I could be near my daughter but my son-in-law, of course objected.

Do you think it would do any good to talk to him myself and ask him why he treats me so coldly?

ANSWER: This is an in-law angle that doesn't crop up as frequently as some other problems. We're always hearing about the mother who wants to continue to run her child's life even after marriage, or the son who marries and promptly forgets he ever had a mother, but most sons-in-law will get along with their wives' mothers if given the least bit of encouragement. Remember the saying, "The groom's mothers loses a son, but the bride's mother gains one."

Your son-in-law seems to be a cold fish beyond the reach of any reasoning. I doubt if talking to him would do much good. It's probably best to take your daughter's advice; ignore him as much as possible, pretend not to notice his odd behavior and one of these days when he needs you he'll sing a different tune.

The in-law problem in one form or another poses one of the queerest quirks in human nature. It certainly is one of the most frequent causes of marital disaster, although in the vast majority of cases it shouldn't be a problem at all. A little forbearance, a little understanding, a little co-operation and all parties concerned would get

Opposition Subsidizing on Admitting More Nations Into the Atlantic Pac

By DeWitt MCKENZIE

There has been considerable opposition by Britain, Norway and Denmark to America's proposal to include Greece and Turkey in the North Atlantic treaty organization — but its opposition seems to be subsidizing.

Whether it will subsidize to the point of full agreement — actual inclusion of the two countries in the formal pact — is an open question. That something will be done to bring them into the partnership of Western defense arrangement does seem most likely.

The United States itself originally was opposed to inclusion of these Near East states, but changed her mind. This change was signaled about two months ago. That was when General Eisenhower told the U. S. foreign relations committee, just before he went abroad to assume his North Atlantic command, that he would like to see Turkey, Greece, Spain and Yugoslavia brought into the set-up. He pointed out that this would give the Atlantic pact countries a really strong right flank instead of a weak one.

Turkey and Greece, of course, would be vital positions at the eastern end of this flank.

Both these countries had desired to be included but some members of the pact — notably Britain — didn't wish to complicate the organization by stretching it that far. While they would be glad to have bases in Greece and Turkey, they didn't want to pledge reciprocal defense of the two in event of aggression. And naturally the Greeks and Turks wanted protection.

Washington's main consideration in changing its mind, as I understand it, revolved about two points:

1. The psychological aspect that making Turkey and Greece members of the pact would give them a needed feeling of security and, consequently, would increase the bond of amity with the Western powers.

2. The more practical consideration that the U. N. Security Council in that part of the world, and that this necessarily involves a two-way treaty under which Greece and Turkey would receive reciprocal protection.

Well, it's easy to understand the feeling of the Greeks and Turks, sitting as they do almost under the snarls of Russia's big guns. They have plenty of courage, but it takes more than that to stand up against a Moscow which is backed by the Soviet's Balkan satellites.

The way it looks from here, it will be a good bargain if the Western powers bring Greece and Turkey into the Atlantic pact. Or, if that fails, to make some other arrangement which will make their relations with the United States more like those of actual pact members. Both these nations of course have been famous through the centuries for their fighting men.

Maj. Gen. Reuben E. Jenkins, until recently head of the U. S. mission in Greece, said the other day that Greece has "the best trained army, man for man, unit for unit, in Western Europe." He added that the army has 500,000 trained men ready for immediate service, and he figured that the army would give an invading force "a helluva bloody nose, regardless of the invader's strength."

As for the famous fighting Turks, they would be a tower of strength, once the army was reorganized and adequately equipped. Experts estimate that a rehabilitated Turkish army could immobilize a substantial part of Russia's forces along without strife.

If a mother would just let her married child go from the parental nest with grace and tact she would find far less heartache than she does in battling the situation.

If a young wife would only realize that her husband still owes some allegiance to his mother, and not tug so hard to break his home ties, she would reap a bountiful harvest of friendship and love from her mother-in-law; if a new benedict would deprecate the fact that a mother and daughter relationship can not be disrupted by a few words spoken at the altar, and perhaps look ahead to the time when when he'd be darn glad to have grandma in to baby-sit, the trials and tribulations of in-law difficulties would vanish like a breeze.

Instead, the trouble begins on the wedding day, if not before, with sonny's mother hating her new daughter-in-law, and convinced that the girl's only object in life is to keep her husband away from his mother. The wife's mother is equally convinced that her daughter's life will be wrecked by the imprudent wretch she has chosen to marry. The wife knows beyond all question of doubt that her mother-in-law is out to ruin the marriage as quickly as possible and the husband sees his in-laws parked on him as permanent spongers.

Trying to talk anyone of them in to a different attitude would be a harder task than cleaning the Augean stable. If each would just confront the situation wisely, and see it in its true light, the problems would disappear and young marriages would get off to better starts.

Of course there are in-law situations that are well-nigh insoluble, but these are not too common, and I flatter "bears" of marriage—"bear" and "forbear" would be remembered mother-in-law jokes would soon be outmoded.

DEAR DOROTHY DIX: How can a boy acquire the art of keeping a conversation going with a girl who has almost no conversation when he is not so talkative himself? It takes a gift, or is there a way to learn such a thing? Should one prepare a conversation before going out? If so, how? And if not, what do you suggest?

M. E. C.

ANSWER: The gift of gab is something that comes by nature and I doubt if it can be acquired. It is impossible to prepare a conversation in advance because you cannot possibly know what trend the talk is going to take, and the charm of all conversation lies in its spontaneity and freshness. The only thing for you to do is pick your company and associate with people who like to do all the talking and who would be perfectly fascinated with you as a listener.

Republicans Denounce Pled by President

Washington, May 19 — (AP)—President Truman's new appeal for national unity in the face of the MacArthur controversy was denounced today alongside a Republican senator's "whitewash" charge against Democrats.

Mr. Truman declared last night "we are in the midst of one of the greatest crises this country has ever faced." He added that, unless the free nations successfully met the challenge, "the casualties in Korea will be one small drop in the bucket" compared to those "from one of those horrid bombs, we talk so much about."

That was an obvious allusion to what the President feels would happen if an atomic attack was loosed against the United States and its Allies.

Mr. Truman bid for unity in a brief informal speech at a national dinner, forces say dinner here. His remark were broadcast to American and other United Nations troops in Korea and Japan.

It was an address at the same dinner by Secretary of Defense Marshall, who said the Allies' forces in Korea "have dissipated the defeatism of a year ago" and have given new life to the U. N. north Atlantic Treaty organization and the free world generally.

Neither the President nor Marshall made any mention of Mr. Truman's dismissal of Gen. Douglas MacArthur from his Pacific command. But against the background of his storm that action stirred Mr. Truman said:

"You must quit your bickering here at home, you must quit playing petty politics."

A few hours before the President spoke, Senator Wiley (R-Wis.) had charged that a majority of the senate committee investigating the dismissal of MacArthur has "a frantic desire to cover-up and whitewash."

Wiley set forth the contention in a letter to Senator Russell (D-Ga.), chairman of the combined senate armed forces and foreign relations committees conducting the inquiry.

Although Wiley, a member of the group, directed his accusation at the committee majority, his office said later he was talking about the Democrats on the committee.

He said the investigation may wind up as "not only a whitewash but a wash-out."

The Wisconsin senator wrote Russell after being defeated 18 to 8 in the committee Thursday in an attempt to force Gen. Omar Bradley to relate what was said at a conference he and other top advisers had with Mr. Truman April 6, five days before MacArthur was fired.

Six Republicans joined 12 Democrats in upholding Russell's ruling that Bradley did not have to tell what went on. Bradley, chairman of the joint chiefs of staff, had declined to answer on the ground that to do so would destroy his value as a confidential advisor to the President.

Suit Against
Picayune Ends

New Orleans, May 18 — (AP) —
After three weeks' testimony, trial of the government's civil anti-trust suit against the Times-Picayune Publishing Co. is ended but the judge's decision will not be made until late summer.

The last witness testified yesterday but oral argument was deferred until July 12.

U. S. Attorney General Howard
McGuire filed the suit in U. S.
District court here June 12 against the publishers of the combination morning Times-Picayune and afternoon Times-Orleans State. But the decision could affect 170 other publishers who publish morning and afternoon combination newspapers.

Whether decision is made by
U. S. district court Judge A. Herbert Christensen, the losing side is almost certain to appeal to the U. S. Supreme court.

The government contended its attack on the Times-Picayune Publishing Co.'s practice of requiring national and classified advertisers
to buy space in the morning Times-Picayune and afternoon States as a unit. Advertisers are not permitted to run ads in either paper separately.

Justice department attorneys maintained this practice — known as a forced combination — violated anti-trust laws.

ing 12 by 12 feet each being more than 10 feet deep.

Phillies Lose 20th Game

Philadelphia, May 19 — (AP) — While losing their 20th game of the season last night, the Philadelphia Phillies also lost the services of veteran shortstop Eddie Joost for
"at least a week."

Dr. Milton Gopals, team physician, said Joost will be out that long with a bruised kneecap — even if X-rays don't disclose any more serious injury.

Joost was struck by a pitch thrown by Detroit's southpaw Sal Carr in the seventh inning.

The Tigers won 9-6 with six runs in the last frame.

Welcome to Zernial
Says Richards

New York, May 19 — (AP) — The Philadelphia Athletics are welcome to Gus Zernial and his amazing burst of homers this week, says the man who surrendered the big slugger to the A's.

Paul Richards, freshman manager of the Chicago White Sox, declared he still would rather have Orestes Minoso, the fleet Cuban Negro he landed in the three-cornered deal which sent Pitcher Lou Brubeck of the A's to Cleveland.

"I wouldn't trade back right now, even if Gus had hit a dozen homers in three days," said the man from Waukegan.

"I'm glad to see that Gus is helping Jimmie Dykens, but I like the man we got."
Gus isn't fast, and no player can be great unless he is fast, Minoso can fly. In him and Jim Rusby I think I've got so fast a pair as there is in baseball.

Nation in Tribute to Fighting Men

By The Associated Press
In scores of speeches and a display of flexing military muscle the nation today paid tribute to its united armed forces at home and on the field of battle in Korea.

Eight of the world's mightiest aircraft — the B-26 bombers of the air — thundered over cities from the Huntle to the Pacific and Canada to Mexico. Ground forces marched while tanks and artillery clanked behind them. The navy put its warships on show.

In Korea soldiers, sailors, marines and airmen battled grimly a hold back Communist aggression
while the military buildup demonstrated at home is completed.

President Truman was the first of over 100 government and military speakers at Armed Forces day gatherings. He made an appeal, in an address last night, for national unity "in the midst of one of the greatest crises this country has ever faced."

Secretary of Defense Marshall
followed the President as speaker
at a national Armed Forces day dinner in Washington.

The brief remarks by Mr. Truman and Marshall were broadcast to American and other United Nations troops in Korea and Japan.

"You must quit your bickering here at home," Mr. Truman admonished against the backdrop of the MacArthur controversy, "you must quit playing petty politics."

Marshall said the military effort in Korea has "disrupted the development of a year ago" and has given new life to the U. N., the North Atlantic Treaty organization and the free world generally.

Today the armed services are playing home to the public. They are holding "open house" at most of their installations. Marshall has invited all citizens to visit the military posts nearest them.

In the U. S., ports the navy has 177 vessels which will be open to public inspection. Many of them have recently returned from the Korean war zone.

The air force has eight of its monster bombers flying from city to city from 7 a. m. EST, until late in the afternoon, Pacific Standard Time. Flying daily, they will pass over more than 250
cities and military installations, including the capitals of all the 48 states.

Much of the newest military equipment will be on display at some of the celebrations. A Russian-made tank, captured by U. S.
forces in Korea, will be among the Washington exhibits.

a parade on Constitution avenue.

FIRE RUINS PORT
Quito, Ecuador, May 19 — (AP) —
The port of Remaride was reportedly destroyed last night by a fire which destroyed 400 homes and caused an estimated $300,000 damage. No loss of life was reported.

The fire — one of the worst in Ecuador's history — broke Thursday in the northern banana exporting town of 14,000 people.

WINS IN TENNIS
Fayetteville, May 19 — (AP) —
The University of Arkansas defeated Southwestern Missouri 4 to 2 in variety tennis matches here yesterday.

Natural Curiosity
One of nature's curiosities is the difference in size between a mother kangaroo and her young.
The mother stands four or more feet high and weighs about 200 pounds. The young, when first born, are a little more than an inch long and weigh less than a penny.

Indians believe giant cyprus trees
of Santa Fe and Taos, New Mexico, are the spirits of the dead.

BRITISH TRAIN GERMANS—While re-arming Germany re-opens a point of hot debate between Russia and the Western Allies, the British are giving military training to some 60,000 labor service troops, mostly Germans. Photo, taken at Osnabruck, in the British zone, shows "Sgt. Maj. Blacknell, of the Middlesex Regiment, drilling recruits in the manual of arms. One rookie holds Blacknell's drill stick while he uses the recruit's rifle to demonstrate "drill arms." (Photo by NEA-Acme Staff Photographer Allyn Baum.)
